ADVERTISEMENT.

THE following documents have been chiefly taken from the Registers of the Privy Council of Scotland, and the Records of the City of Edinburgh. A desire of becoming acquainted with the rights and privileges of the Officers of the Scottish Household, and, among those, of the Usher of the White Rod, first prompted a research into the ancient Records of Scotland, and the collection of a great mass of old documents. These, relative to the Coronations, Ridings of Parliament, Visits, Progresses, Marriages and Baptisms of our Scottish Kings, present a lively picture of the ancient manners, customs and ceremonies of our forefathers, and tend to elucidate the remote history of this ancient kingdom.

It has been thought advisable to publish extracts from some of the most curious and valuable of these documents; and, for this purpose, a large collection, carefully compared with the original records, has been arranged, and is nearly in a fit state for publication. To render the work complete, assistance has been asked, and kindly granted, by many of the most learned Antiquaries of our island, and documents have been examined in various parts of Scotland.

The visit of His Majesty GEORGE IV., to Edinburgh, has induced the Compiler to publish a specimen of the Work, confined to the Receptions of our Sovereigns, at Edinburgh, from the landing of MARY, Queen of Scots at Leith, in 1561, to the Welcome of King CHARLES II. in 1650. He considers this a fit opportunity to give the public a knowledge of some of these documents, as, at this time, they will be peculiarly interesting. An account of the reception and progress of His MAJESTY on the present occasion, which, the Compiler anticipates, will equal in splendour, any of those of our ancient Kings, will form an appropriate Appendix to the Work.

I.—LETTER FROM HIS MAJESTY TO THE PRIVY COUNCIL OF SCOTLAND, ANENT THE CAUSIS OF HIS HEIRCOMING
—DEC. 15, 1616.*

JAMES R.

Richt trustie and right welbeloved cosen and coun-sallor and right trustie and welbeloved counsellours, We greet you well: It could not bot be verie grievous unto us, if the earnest desyre whiche we have long had to visite that our native and ancient kingdome of Scotland, sould be mett at our arrivall there with ane unwelcome coldnes of a number of our goode subjectis in that cuntrey, and that by the occasion of a prejudged
opinion in manie of our peoples heartis, grounded upoun

* It is to be regretted that the Volume of the Records of Privy Council from which this Letter is taken is much obliterated in many parts, and has occasioned various blanks.

fals rumours ayther maliciouslie or foolishliespred anent the causes and erandes of our intentioun to repair thither at this tyme ; We have therefore thocht it verie convenient for preventing of this mistaking, to make by these presents ane ingenuous and sincere professioun unto you of the motives induceing us to resolve upon our journey thither at the tyme appointed.

First, Wee ar not achamed to confesse that wee have had these many yeiris a great and naturall longing to see our native soyle and place of our birth and breeding, and this salmonlyke instinct of ouris hes restleslie, both when wee wer awake and manie tymes in our sleip, so stirred up our thoghtis and bended our desyris to make a jorney thither, that wee can never rest satisfied till it sall pleas God that wee may accomplish it : And this we do upoun our honour declair to be the maine and principall motive of our intended journey.

Bot unto this desyre of ouris, proceding from a naturall man, and the care wee have to discharge our kinglie office, the tyme of our being there, and so to mak use of our naturall affectioun bythat occasion to the discharge of our calling, wherein grite care salbe to heare and give redresse to suche ...
..... of our subjectis (if anie there be) as could not utherwayes be redrest without our awne presence ;

and our next care salbe anie suche abuse or disor-dour (if wee sall find anie) as could not be so weele performed in our absence.

As for making anie alterations or reformatiōs in the
..... that government eyther ecclesiasticall or civile.
It is.....will be glad that by our presence als manie thinges tending to

onlie you, who by your place ar best acquainted with our intentions unto all our other goode sub-jectis of whatsomever degree, to have that settled confidence in our honestie and discretioun, that wee will not so muche as wishe anie thing to be done there which sall not tend to the glorie of God and the weale of that commounwealth, and all our goode subjectis therein ; As also there may be diverse thingis whiche although we might justlie wishe thame, yet may there be so manie impedimentis and lettis to crosse thame, that although in our conscience and honestie we might avow thame to be goode, yet in our discretioun wee wold be loth to trouble ourselfis and oure good subjectis with thame at this tyme, except they might as weill prove to the generall lyking and applause of our people as to the benefeit and weele of the common wealth.

Wee ar therefore hereby earnestlie to desyre you, that yee will not onlie for your owne partes harbour no prejudged conceipte of our intentioun upoun the grounds of these idill rumours, but also make this our sincere declaration come to the eares of our other goode subjectis, that wee may haif comforte of such a joyfull meiting there with our people, as wee for our part sall ever deserve.

To conclude, wee pray you to rest assured that our intentioun is so to behave our selfe the tyme of our being there, as everie one sall see that our care sall not be wanting to do as muche goode as wee can, and yet so to carie our selfe as our actions salbe accompanied with the applause and hearty consent of all our goode people: And these premisses most affectuouslie recommending to your speciall care, we bid you fair-weele. Given at Newmarket, the 15th of December 1616.

II.—NOTICES FROM THE RECORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL, RELATIVE TO THE RECEPTION OF THE KING, 1617.

Direction to the Burgh of Edinburgh anent Preparatiounis for His Majesties heircoming.—
*Dec. 24, 1616.

Forsameikle as the Kingis Majestie oute of his tender and princelie love and regaird to this his native and

* Preparatory to the above direction, the Privy Council did on the 22d of May 1616, issue the following—“ Warrant for repairing his Majesties houssis.” “ Forsameikle as the Kingis Majestie haueing resolut to honour this his ancient kingdome with his royall presence, God willing, in the beginning of the nixt spring of the Sex Hundreth and Seveintene year of God, It is verie necessar and expedient for his Majesties contented receptioun, that his Majesties paliceis of Halirudhous and Falkland, and the Castell of Striviling be repairit, and all defectis therein mendit. Thairfoir the Lordis of Secret Counsall, gevis commissioun and warrant, be thir presents, to James Murray, master of his Majesties workis, to tak down the hail rooffe and thake of the ludging abone the vtter yett, callit the Chancellaries ludging, with sa meikle of the stane worke as is requisite, and to caus the same be buildit up, and perfyte of new, and to tak down to the ground the chalmer within the pallace of Halirudehous, callit the Mr Stewartis chalmer, and on nawayes to build up the same agane, in respect of the deformitie and disproportion that it hes with the rest of the building thair. And to tak down the chalmer and garlie in Halirudhouse callit Sir Roger Ashtonis chalmer, and to build up the same of new, in a con-ancient kingdome, haueing thir mony yeires bigane had a grite and naturall longing to see the same, as being venient forme. And to tak down the kitcheing in halirudhous, callit chancellair Maitlandis kitcheing in the end of the transe, callit the Dukis transe, bothe in the rooffe, jeistis, and walles, so far as is necessar, and to build up the same of new. And to tak down the toofalles in the baikhous yairde of Halyrudhous, and the haill dykis of the baikhous yairde, and not to big up the same agane, sua that of the yairde, ane perfyte cloise may be maid. And to tak down the auld entree in the Castell of Striuling betuix the utter yett and inner yett, with the little rowme on ether syde of the said entrie, and to bestow and imploy the staines and otheris materiallis therof on some otheris workis within the Castell. And to tak down the haill rooffe and thake of the Kingis kitchin in the said Castle, with samekle of the stane-worke therof as salbe requisite, and to builde up the same of new, and to tak down the Court kitcheing bewest the Kingis kitcheing, and the baikhous and pantrie within the said Castell, and to build up the same of new. And to tak down the thake of the toure above the inner yett, and to thake it of new agane. And to tak down the haill thake and rooffis of the King and Quenis galleries in Falkland, & to help the stane-work therof, and big ane barteseene about thame, and theik thame with lead. And to tak down the haill thake and samekle of the rooff, as is falters of the haill ludgeing of Falkland, and to streke out duris and wondois, and to repair, help and reforme the same as the sall think meet, and to thake the same of new yf neid beis—ffor doing quhair of thir presents salbe vnto the said matter of worke ane warrand.”

Besides this warrant for repairing the Palaces of Holyroodhouse and Falkland, and the Castle of Stirling, the following Proclamations appear to deserve a place in this Collection:—

his natie soile and place of his birth, has resoluit, God willing, this approching sommer to accomlishe his in-“ Proclamatioun againis the slaying of his Majesties Buckis in Falkland, Jan. 14, 1617.

“ Forsamekle as the Kingis Majestie hes gevin directioun and command to brek and mak oppin the park and dyke of his Majesties park of Falkland in some pairtis thairrof, to the effect that the buckis and beastis within the same may sometymes raik furthe thairrof, that so being acquentit with the voyde and oppin pairtis of the dykes, his Majestie, at his coming heir, God willing, to the hunting this approtcheing sommer, may haif the better occasioun of his sporte and gayme: And whereas his Majestie doubtis not bot that all honnest and dewtifull subjectis, oute of that reverent respect and regaird whilk thay carye to his Majestie, will forbear to hunt or slay any of the beastis that sall raik furthe of the said park this present yeir, or to do any other thing whilk may be a latt and hinder to his Majesties sporte and gayme; yitt becaus it is lyke aneugh that some undentifull personis, in contempt of his Majestie, and misregaird of his Majesties pleasor and contentment, will hunt or slay suche of the beastis of the said park as thay sall find straigling and raiking through the cuntrey. His Majestie, thairfoir, with advise of the Lordis of his Secreit Counsall, ordanis letteris to be direct, to command, chairge, and inhibite all and sindrie his Majesties lieges and subjectis, of quhat estate, qualitie, degree, or conditioun soeuer thay be, That nane of thame presoom nor tak upoun hand, to hurt or slay any of the buckis or beastis that sall raik furthe of the said park this present yeir, vnder the panes following, to be incurrit be the persone or persones quhatsomever that sall violat or contraveene this present act and proclamation: That is to say, euerie Erll, fyve hundreth merkis; euerie Lord, foure hundreth merkis; euerie baron, three hundreth merkis; euery landit gentilman, one hundreth merkis; and euerie common man, forty pundis;—Certi-tendit journey heir, and to honor this kingdome with his royall presence, in the quhilk journey his Majestie will be fieing thame, that failyies or dois in the contrair, that the saidis panes sal be vpliftit of thame, and they sal be otherwayes punist in thair personis at the arbitrement of his Majesties Counsell.” On the same day there is an “Agreement with the tennentis of the park of Haliruidhous”—“That the said park may be keepit and hayned for the pasturing and feeding of some wedderis and otheris bestiall for the furnishing of his Majesties house,” &c.

Proclamatioun anent the Ludgeings in the Cannogait, Feb. 13, 1617.

Forsameikle as the Magistratis of the Cannogait being commandit to gif in to the Lordis of Secreit Counsell ane roll of the haill ludgeingis and stablis within thair toun, to the effect the saidis Lordis might knowe and understand how mony of his Majesties tryne and followaris, as necessarlie mon be ludgeit neir his Majesties persone, dureing his aboade at Haliruidhous, might be commodiouslie accommodat in ludgeingis and stablis within the said Cannogait, The saidis Magistratis hes gevin in a roll of thair saidis ludgeingis and stablis, proporting and bearing that all thair ludgeings and stablis ar alreddy tane be noblemen, baronis, and gentlemen of this cuntrey, sua that thair is not ane free house in the Cannogait quhair ony of his Majesties tryne may be ludgeit, whilk being a matter verie offensive to his Majestie, and that can nowayis stand with his Majesties contentment, nor the credite of the cuntrey, that his Majesties propper dommes-tiques, and these who mon necessarlie attend his royall person, salbe constrained to seeke thair ludgeings in remote and far pairtis from his Majesties house and palice, to the disapointing and neglecting of his Majesties service; Thairfore the Lordis of Secreit Counsell hes thought meete to intimat and declare to all these who hes tane or myndis to tak ludgeings and stablis in the Cannogait, that they will be frustrat and disappointit of accompanyit with diuers of his nobilitie & counsall, & with some of the reuerend clergie, besides a grite number thair intentis, and that all the saidis ludgeingis and stablis will be tane up and markit for his Majesties awne tryne and followaris, be his Majesties harbingeiris at their heir-coming; And ordanis lettres to be direct to mak publicatioun heirop, be oppin proclamatioun, at the mercat croceis of Edinburgh and the Cannogait; and to warne all persons who hes tane or myndis to tak ludgeings or stablis in the Cannogait, that they provide thameselfis of ludgeings and stablis, otherwayes assuering thame that thay wil be disapointit of thair intentis in the Cannogait, and that all the ludgeingis and stablis thair wil be markit and tane up for his Majesties tryne and followaris, as said is.

Proclamatioun aganis the slaughter of Murefoule—April 30, 1617.

Forsamekle as the Kingis Majesties awne earnest desire, and the necessair affairs of this estaite, having invited his Majestie thir mony yeiris bigane, to visite this his ancient and native kingdome; and his Majestie having now, by the favour of almighty God, almost accomplished his jorney and progress hither with most comfortable and happy succes, being honourable accompanied with diuers of the nobilitie, counsall, and otheris, his goode subjectis of the kingdome of England, it may fall oute; that during the tyme of his Majesties aboade in this cuntrey, his Majestie mon some tyme haif his recreatioun, exercise, and pastyme in the fields, and thairfore it is necessair That the murefoul, pairtridges, and pountis, within ten myles of the placeis of his Majesties aboade heir, salbe preservit and cairfullie haynit for his Majesties pastyme and gayme; for whilk purpois, ordains lettres to be direct, to command, chaarge, and inhibite all and sindrie his Majesties lieges and subjectis, be oppin proclamatioun at the mercat croce of Edinburgh, and otheris placeis neidfull, That nane of other people of all rankis and qualities, from the kingdome of England. And whereas the place of his first rendezvous and langest aboade during his stay in this kingdome, will be at his Majesties palace of Halirudhous, it will necessarlie fall oute that his nobilitie and gentrie, with the grittest pairt of his tryne and followaris (of whome thair will be a few number of personis of goode, rank and qualitie), mon be ludgeit within the burgh of Edinburgh, the Cannogait, and suburbs of the said burgh, being the chief and principall toun of this kingdome, quhair his Majesties high and so-

of thame presoom, nor tak vpoun hand at ony tyme after the publicatioun heirof, to slay ony murefoull, pairtridgeis, or pouttis, within ten myles of the burgh of Edinburgh, and otheris pairtis of his Majesties aboade in this kingdome, during the tyme of his Majesties being within the same, vnder the pane of ane hundreth pundis, to be incurrit be euery persone or persones contraveening this present act, sa oft as thay sall failyee, quhilk failyee salbe tryed be oathe or be witness as accordis; And whairas the personis contraveening are not able to pay the said sowme, they salbe punist in thair personis, by wairding and feiding vpon breade and watter at the arbitrement of his Majesties counsall; and to command and chairge all Magistrates to burgh and land, and all Justices of peace, every ane of thame, within thair awne boundis, to haif a speciall cair and regaird that this present act be preceislie kept, and that they appoint searcheouris and visitouris to try quhair and be whome the same is violat and brokin, and to notifie thair names to his Majesties thesaurair, or thesaurair-depute, to the effect the contravenaris may be callit and punist accordinglie.

ueraine courte of Parliament, his Majesties honnorable previe counsall, and the grand and learned senatouris of his colledge of Justice will ordinarlie sitt : The strangearis and otheris that ar to accompany his Ma-jestie heir will be so much the more cairfull narrowlie to remarke vpoun and espy the carriage and conversatione of the inhabitantes of the said toun, forme of ther interteynment and ludgeing, and gif thair housis be and their bedding and naprie clene and neate; and, according as they sall find, they will mak reporte outhir to the credite and or to the reproche and scandall of this burgh. And seeing, &c. Thairfore the Lordis of Secreitt Counsall has commandit, and be thir presentis commandis and ordanis
the provest and baillies of Edinburgh, with the concurrence of the baillies of the Cannogait, within the Can-nogait, and of the baillies of the Potterrow and Weste Porte, within their boundis, to mak a perfyte survey of the haill ludgeingis, stabillis, within the said burgh of Edinburgh, the Cannogait, Leythe Wynde, Plea-sance, Potterraw, and Weste Porte, and to foirsee and prouide that thair be goode ludgeingis within the saidis boundis for fyve thowsand men and stablis for fyve-thowsand horse. And yf, by the said survey, they sall not find so manie good stabillis within the saidis boundis
as will convenientlie serve for fyve thousand horse, that they designe barnis to be stabillis, and caus haikis and mangeiris to be set up in thame. And in this accompt and number of men and horses for whome ludgeingis and stabillis are to be preparit, they ar all to be vnderstoode to be of his Majesties tryne and followaris come frome England, who mone be accomodate and easit in ludgeingis and stabillis afoir ony of this cuntrie people. And ordanis the saidis provest and baillies to mak a perfyte and cleir rolle of the hail ludgeingis and stabillis, and of the barnis to be appointit for stabillis within the saidis boundis, designing the particular placeis of the situatioun of the same, the names of the awnaris and possessouris thairof, the number of chalmers and beddis within euery house, and how manie strangearis may be commodiouslie ludgeit in the same, and how mony horse euery one of the saidis stabillis will hold. And it is heirby recommended unto the saidis Magistrats to see that the saidis ludgeingis be furnist with honnest and clene bedding, and weele weshin and weele smellit naprie, and otheris linningis, and with a sufficient number and quantitie of goode veshells, cleane and cleir, and of sufficient lairgenes. And likewayes, that they caus the tynneis courtis within the saidis boundis to be repairit, and that all thair stablairs be furnist with sufficiencie of corne, strae, and hay, Commanding alsua the Magistratis of Edinburgh, the Cannogait, Potterraw, and West Porte, that every one of thaim, within thair awne boundis, haif a cair, and gif directioun for keeping of their strettis cleene, and that no filthe nor middingis be seen vpoun the same, and that no beggaris be seene within thair boundis; Commanding alsua the saidis Magistratis of the Cannogait, Potterraw, and West Porte, to gif their efauld and honnest concurrence, euery ane of thame, within thair awne boundis, to the provest and baillies of Edinburgh, in euerie thing tending to the executioun of this commissioun and directioun, as thay will ansueir vpoun their obedience, at their heichest perrell: Ordaining alsua the prouest and baillies of Edinburgh to mak thair reporte unto the saidis Lordis of their proceidingis in this bussynes and to present befor the saidis Lordis the roll foirsaid of the ludgeingis and stabillis within the saidis boundis, vpoun the sixtene day of Januar, to the effect forder ordor may be tane heiranent, as apperteynis.

Act in favours of the Provost and Baillies of Edinburgh anent the Kings Bark.—Dec. 11, 1628.

Anent the supplicatioun presentit to the Lords of Secret Counsale, be the provest and baillies of Edinburgh, Makand mention, that whair when our lait Soverane Lord come to this kingdome, they built ane
bark for his Majesties transport betwix the ferryis.
And it was our Soverane now present his pleasure,
that they sould doe the lyke againe his Majesties heere cuming, whilk in all submissive and deutifull obedience, the saids supplicants ar willing to performe.
Bot they are informed that thair is some other course intendit for his Majesties service in this point, whereunto (if so be his Majesties pleasure) they are willing in all humilitie to acquiesce. Humbly desyring tharfore, the said Lords to lat thayme know how to carie thameselfis in this matter, lyke as at mair lenth
is contenit in the said supplicatioun; quhairupoun
Alexander, Erle of Linlithgow, Lord High Admirall
of this kingdome, being heard, and he being demandit
if he had anie purpose or intention to doe anie thing in this mater, he declaired that the charge of that bus-sines belonged unto him as his Majesties admirall, and that he would doe thairin that whilk to the deutie and credite of his place and charge apperteanned for his Majesties honnour and contentment. In respect of the whilk declaratioun made be the Lord Admirall, The Lords of Secreit Counsall exoners and releeves the saidis supplicants of all blame, cryme, and imputation, that may be imputed aganis thame, or layed to thair charge, for not preparing of ane bark for his Majesties transport betwix the ferryes, and declares thame to be fred and exonerod thairof for ever.

Warrant for bigging up the east style of Halyruidhouse kirk-yaird.—Feb. 26, 1629.

Forsameikill as the Lords of Secreit Counsall, considering how that thir divers yeeres bygane, the people repairing to the burgh of Edinburgh, from Mussilburgh, Fisherraw, and other pairts in East Lothiane, hes maid thair ordinarie passage throw the kirk-yard of Halyruidhous, whilk they defyle with filth and otherwayis, especiallie at the verie side of the kirk, and direct under the windowes of his Majesties galrie of Halyruidhouse, whilk will be verie unseemlie to be sene be strangers the time of his Majesties heere being: Thairfore the saids Lords, upon the consideration foresaid, and upoun many othir good respects, hes thought meit and expedient, commanded and ordained, that the east style, leading to the church-yard of the said kirk sall be closed and built up with stone and lyme, for restrayning of the passage of people throw the said kirk-yaird, whilk is no hie nor ordinarie way. Anent the closing and building up of the whilk style, this present act sall be unto these whome it concerns a sufficient warrand.

March 5, 1629.

The Lords of Secreit Counsell, remembring that the Admirall. Magistrats of the burgh of Edinburgh made offer to prepare a pinnace upoun their awin charges, for transporting of his Majestie to and fra Leith, Bruntilland, and Kinghorne ; and that the Erle of Linlithgow, Lord Admirall, opposed the same, and undertooke the burden thair of as ane point proper to his charge ; Thairfore the Lordis finds, that if his Majesties admirall has or will build a pinnace for that service, that he must doe it upon his awin charges, and that his Majesties coffers must not be burdeined thairwith.

Directioun to the schireff of Edinburgh anent the Hiewayes.—March 26, 1629.

Proclamation anent Lodgings in the Cannogait.—Feb. 28.

Forasmeikle as the Lords of Secreit Counsell ar informed, that the whole, or most pairt of the lodgingis and stables within the Cannogait ar alreadie tane up be some persones of this kingdome, so that suche of his Majesties tryne and followeris as necessarilie must be lodged neere his Majesties persoun during his abode at Halyrudhous will not be commodiouslie accommodat in lodgings and stables within the said Cannogait, bot will be constrained to seek their lodgings in remote and farr places from his Majesties hous and palace, to the disappointing and neglecting of his Majesties service, which will not onlie be offensive to his Majestie, bot will be a great discredit to the countrie, that his Majesties proper domesticks, who must necessarilie attend his royall persoun, sall be disappointed of their lodgings: Thairfoir, the Lords of Secreit Counsell hes thought meit, heirby to intimat and declare, that all these who hes tane, or myndes to take lodgings and stables in the Cannogait, that they will be frustrat and disappointed of their intents, and that all the saids lodgings and stables will be tane up and marked for his Majesties owne tryne and followers, be his Majesties harbingers, at their heere coming. And ordains letters to be direct to mak publication hereof be open proclamatioun, at the mercat cross of Edinburgh, and the Cannogait, and to warne all persones who hes tane or myndes to take lodgings and stables in the Canongait, that they provide thameselffes of lodgings and stables, otherwayes assuring thame that they will be dissappointed, and that the saids lodgings and stables will be tane up and marked for his Majesties tryne and followers.

Warrant to take the Heads aff the West Port.

—Mar. 14.

The Lords of Secreit Counsell, in regarde of the solemniteis and showes quhilks ar to be made by the Magistrats of the burgh of Edinburgh, at the West-port of the said burgh at his Majesties entrie within the same, gives warrant and allowance be thir presents to the provest and baillies of Edinburgh, to caus tak aff the heads of some malefactours whilks ar set up upon the said West-port, quhereanent thir presents sall be to thame ane warrant.

ANENT HIS MAJESTIES ENTRIE IN EDINBURGH,
AND CORONATIOUN.—June 12, 1633.

The Lords of Secreit Counsell having takin to thair consideratioun the forme and order fitting to be observed at his Majesties entrie within the burgh of Edinburgh, it is thought meit that the Scottish nobilitie sall preceed and ryde immediatlíe before his Majestie, and that the English nobilitie sall ryde behind his Majestie, and that the nobilitie sall keep thair rankes without mixing with the gentry, and that the Lord Marishell have ane care that they ryde in order without presse or confusioun.

The Lords thinke fit that his Majestie, about the west end of the long gait neere to St Cuthbert's church, sall take his great horse, whereupon he is to enter in the toun, and that the heretour and tennent of the ground sall be satisfied of the skaith whilk they sall susteane upon that occasioun.

That a sword be carried before his Majestie at his entrie within the toun, and that the same be delyvered be the Lord Chamberlane to suche a nobleman as the King sall appoint for the carrying thair of.

Anent the carrying of the canopie, the tyme of his Majesties Coronatioun, it is thought meit that there be ane list of twelffe noblemens sones presentit to his Majestie, to the intent his Majestie may out of these make choise of sax for the service foresaid.

It is thought meit, that the hail noblemen and bishops, with sax commissioners for the gentrie, and sax for the burrowes, sall, that morning of the coronatioun, goe to the Kings presence, and there make tender of thair dewtie in name of the estaits, in the words set down in the booke of the coronatioun, quhilk speeche sall be delyvered be the Lord Chancellor.

That his Majestie be consulted anent the order and place to be kepted be the Lords Chancellor and Constable in thair ryding, the time of the entrie, coronatioun, and parliament, as lykeways anent the place and order of ryding of the bishops the tymes foresaids.

Remitts to his Majestie who sall be almoner the day of the coronatioun.

That the honouris be carried be the same persons at the coronatioun who ar to carrie the same at the Parliament, to witt, the eldest in creation.

Remitts to his Majestie who sall carrie the spurres.

The apparrelling and disrobing of his Majestie, the day of the coronatioun, and during the action thereof, belongs to the Lord Chamberlane in the right of his office.

The girding of the King with the sword, as lykewayes the drawing of the sword perteanes to the Constable.

The presenting to his Majestie of the Temporal Lords, who ar to give thair oath, and kisse his Majesties cheeke, is dew to be done be the Constable.

June 13.

The Lords of Secreit Counsell ordanis, that no coache enter within his Majesties court with more then foure horsis.

The Lords of Secreit Counsell ordanis and commands the Provost and Baillies of Edinburgh, to caus take down the gallowes and malefactor hanged thereon at the east end of the linkes.

The Lords thinkes it meit, that the Magistrats of Edinburgh, and the Erle of Roxburgh, as superiour of the Canongait, be required to provide sand in abundance for covering thair streits, As lykewayes, that they be remembered anent the extortioun of chamber maillis within thair bounds.

The Lords thinkes fit, that the trumpetters, the day of his Majesties entrie, meit his Majeste, and sound upon the linkes of Leith.

The Lords thinkes meit, that the gentlemen pensioners sall forbear to ryde or attend his Majesteis person the tyme of his entrie and coronatioun.

Apud Dalkeith, 14th June 1633.

The whilk day the Kings Majestie, with the advice of the Lords of his Secreit Counsell, has thought meit and expedient, concluded and ordained, that, for his Majesties more statelie and orderlie entrie within the burgh of Edinburgh, the Lords Spirituall and Temporal, and others who by thair charge and place owes attendance at that action, sall convey and meit his Majestie upon the long gait, at one of the cloke in the afternoone, where they sall be marshalled and ranked according to thair dignitie and place, and sall ryde and accompanie his Majestie at his entrie within the said burgh, and conduct him to his palace of Halyrudhous, in the manner and order following, to witt, the Marques of Hamilton, as maister of the horses sall ryde a little behind his Majestie, leading ane horse of state ; the Erle of Erroll, by his Majesties appointment sall receive from the Lord Chamberlane, ane shethed sword, which the said Erle sall carie immediatlie before his Majestie, and sall ryde upon the Chamberlane his right hand ; nixt unto thame Lyoun king at armes, and such of his brethren as he sall make choise of ; then the Ischer before him, the Almoner, and Master of Requeists ; nixt to thame, the Lords Chancillor and Thesaurer; then the twa Archbishops; nixt to thame, the Erles and Viscounts, then the Bishops, and last, the Lords. And that the toun of Edinburgh sall have a standing guaird upon either side of the streit, which sall not budge nor remove fra the tyme of his Majesties entering within the West Port, till he pas furth of the liberties of the said toun, and that the volly to be given be the Castell of Edinburgh sall begin, and be fullie delyvered betwix the tyme of his Majesties entering upon the long gait, and his coming to the place appointed for taking of his great horse, whereupon he is to make his entrie within the said toun.

July 5, 1650.

The quhilk day Sir James Stewart, provest, Patrick^{Kings} Thomsone, Robert Lockhart, baillies, &c. being con-^{welcome.}
vened in counsell, Appoyntis the baillie John Bynnie, Dean of Gild, George Suittie, James Ruchied, David Wilkie, Johnne Denham, James Eillies, James Borthuick, Gilbert Sommervell, and Michael Gibsone, to be a committee of the counsell to advyse upon the best way for payment of the tounis proportioun of the fourscoir thousand merkis for the chaarges of the Kings hous ; As also, to advyse quhat is incumbent to be done at this tyme be the good toun for welcomeing
the Kings Majestie, and wpoun the best wey of defraying the expensis therof, and to report their opinions, and to convey in the counsell extraordinarlie for that effect.

July 9. 1650.

The quhilk day, Sir James Stewart, provest, &c. being convened in counsell, appoyntis the provest and sex utheris of the counsell to be sent to the King to congratulat his Majesties arryvell, and invite him to this brugh, quherof four merchandis and twa craftes, and these persones to be chosen to morrow, And sieing the counsell finds it a necessitie that some considerable soume of money be advanced for defrayeing the expensis of the Kings comeing to this toun, Thairfoir doe appoynt that the counsell conveyn to morrow morneing tymeous, and that ilk baillie wairne the nighbouris in ther owen quarteris to be present at the counsell to advyse with them upoun the best way for raiseing therof.

July 10, 1650.

The quhilk day, Sir James Stewart, provest, &c. together with a number of the nighbouris, Andro Sympsoun, &c. and many utheris being convened in counsell.
Forsameikle as the counsell with the nighbouris conveind taking to their serious consideratioun, That now the Kings Majestie being come to this kingdome by the good providence of God, throw many difficulties and dangeris, and haveing given all satisfioun to the desyres of this kirk and kingdome for the good of relijestie, &c.

gion and the peace and securitie of his kingdoms, That therfoir there lyeth upoun this citie a dewtie to congratulat his Majesties safe arryveall to this his auncient kingdome, and to invite his Majestie to this citie, and to welcome and resave his Majestie quhen he sall be pleased to come to the same with all honorabill solemnities can be thoght upoun ; that no dewtie, honor, nor testimonie of respect, loyaltie, or affectioun, may be wanting to his Majestie, quhich wes done to any of his predecessors. And the wholl nighbouris conceiving themselfis bund in dewtie to contribute to the uttermost of their estates, quhat sall be necessarie or fitting to testifie thair loyaltie, affectioun, and cordiall respects to his Majestie, and that in such maner as sall be most for the credite and honor of this his Majesties auncient and metropolitane citie, did most unanimsly and cheirfullie refer to the counsell to determine, in their wisdom, the manner of his Majesties invitatioun, receptioun and welcome, with all solemnities and honorarie acknowledgments necessarie, and the sommes of money to be bestowed, expendit, and debursit therupoun, with the way and maner how the samen sommes sall be raised and repayed, consenting to the borrowing of such sommes of money as the Counsell sall find necessarie for the purposes afoirsaid. Quherupoun the counsell, efter mature deliberatioun, finding it necessarie for the honor of this brugh, that a certaine soume of money be borrowed for the honorabill ends afoirsaid, and resolving to keep within the chaarges expendit in former tymes upon the lyk occasioun, in respect of the present burdens lying upoun the brugh, and upon the wholl kingdome, doe conclude and determine, that the wholl expensis towards the Kings honorabill invitatioun, receptioun, and welcome, sall not exceid fyftie thousand merkis. And siclik, the nighbouris befor named, understanding the necessitie of hastening the perfyting of the fortificatiounis of Leith for the weillfare of this brugh and this part of the kingdome, in respect of the approch of the Sectarian armie to this kingdome, doe consent to the borrowing of fiftie hundreth pund Sterling, for compleiting of the saids fortificatiounis : And finallie, the nighbouris being informed that the reparatioun of the castle, and uther necessities for the publict service, there will be a necessitie of present advance of a considerable part of the townes proportioun of the fourscoir of thousand merkis imposed upoun the burrowis, in lieu of their proportioun of the levie of horse, extending the said proportioun to the soume of twentie eight thousand aught hundreth merkis, quhich is to be payed be the nighbouris in the maner accustomed in former levies ; Thairfor, they also consent to the borrowing of such partis of the said twentie eight thousand aught hundreth merkis, as the committee of estates urge, to be payed and advanced presentlie, in respect they fear the said soume will not be gotten in tymeouslie from the nichbouris : All quhich being seriously considered be the Counsell, Thairfoir, with consent as is afoirsaid, they doe appoynt the thesaurer to borrow money for the severall ends and uses befoirmentionat, and that the Lord Provost, Baillies, Dean of Gild, Thesaurer, and commoun Clerk, subscribe bands in name of the good toun therupoun, Quheranent thir presents sall be their warrand.

The same day electis Sir James Stewart, Lord Provost, Robert Fowlis, Robert Lockhart, Baillies, James Ruchid, David Wilkie, merchandis, James Borthwick, and Gilbert Sommervell, of the counsell, to goe in commissioun to his Majestie at Falkland, and to congratulat his Majesties comeing, and to invite him to this burgh, Quheranent thir presents sall be their warrand.

July 31.

The same day the Counsell being informed that the Kings Majestie haveing come laitlie to Leith unexpectedly, is advysed to remove from thence, for the saftie of his Royall persone, in respect of the neirnes of the enemie to that place. Whairfoir they appoynt the Baillie John Binnie and Robert Lockhart to goe to Leith, and be advice of Mr Robert Dowglas, and others of our ministers, to learne if his Majestie intendis to come to this toun befor his pairting from this syde of the watter. And quhen his Majestie sall come to this toun, ordaines the soume of twentie thousand merkis to be given be the Provost to his Majestie at the Port, as a testimonie of their humble respects and loyall affection to his Majestie, and of ther reddines to offer up their lyfis and fortounes for his Majesties service, in the preservatioun of religioun, king, and kingdome, and ordaines the thesaurer to have the said soume in reddines out of the first end of the money borrowed fra the nighbouris, and that he prepaire all uther things necessarie for his Majestie's honorabill welcome and receptioun in this brugh quhen he comes, as can be done upoun this present unexpected occasioun, Quhereanent thir presents sall be to him a sufficient warrand.

Aug. 7.

The same day ordaines the thesaurer, John Liddell, to pay to William Shaw, merchand, four hunder threttie thrie pund sexten shilling aught penyes, for the expensis of the desert bestowed upon his Majestie, on Fryday last, the second of this instant, conforme to the accompt therof, Quhereanent thir presents sall be his warrand.
